

MEDIA RELEASE

NSW's Young Property Manager of the Year – Brooke Purvis

It was a nervous but equally excited Brooke Purvis from Leah Jay Warners Bay who took to the stage last Saturday evening to receive her 'Award for Excellence'. "I was not so nervous until I got to the venue and saw the large crowd; when I went to the stage I was more concerned about not tripping and also holding the award the right way around for the photographer" said Brooke, explaining how she felt on the night.

Brooke received her award in front of 600 people at the NSW Real Estate Institute's highlight event of the year, held at Darling Harbour Convention Centre in Sydney. Brooke was deemed by the REI to be top amongst her peers of property managers with less than two years experience. Having had an interest in property management, Brooke entered the industry immediately after she completed school. Even before receiving the award, Brooke was pleased with her career choice, with most enjoyment coming from solving the variety of day to day challenges that property management brings.

Leah Jay has a proud and unrivalled history when it comes to major awards from the REI, this one being the fourth since Principal Leah Jay received the 'Award for Excellence in Property Management' in 1998. Leah was present on Saturday evening to see Brooke receive her award and commented "I am so happy for Brooke; right from the beginning she displayed the enthusiasm and dedication necessary to reach this point and thoroughly deserves the kudos that comes with such a prestigious award. I'm also thrilled that our efforts continue to be recognised at the highest level".

Leah Jay also had finalists in two of the other major categories at this year's awards, taking the tally to ten since 1998 and firmly entrenching itself amongst the leaders in property management in NSW.
